

this booklet consists of 26 doodles I did of various album covers, specifically of the first LPs I've collected.

each day, a doodle was shared on an instagram story where I asked the public to guess what album it is.

the album title and actual cover would be revealed the next day as well as a brief recommendation and all the responses collated.

doing this month-long challenge is a fun and engaging way to:

1) test my peers' music knowledge by attempting to recognise its cover through my drawing style.

2) show off my record collection that isn't just a discogs link, and in turn my fav albums/music taste.

3) invite my peers to write tongue-in-cheek answers prompted by the doodle, especially if the album is ubiquitously well known.

4) express my love for the art, photography, design and history that goes into the album cover and its best attempts to summarise its listening experience in a single image.

note: some album covers are missing due to a lack of time to draw them, as this booklet is made in the last month leading up its publication deadline. hence there'll be some number skips on the bottom right.

Reply

"I was so excited to buy my first album on vinyl that I hadn't brought a turntable beforehand. Music collecting was a hobby I dabbled with through buying cds every now and then, but I wasn't sure at the time if I would regularly buy lps (spoiler I did thankfully). What I do know however is the idea of listening to a video game ost that is my pivotal creative influence on a classic analog audio medium is too amusing and awesome to pass."

"the first few records I collected are albums I grown up during my teen years and in turn defined most of my music tastes. this includes my experimental electronic music phase of aphex twin, squarepusher, etc. boards of canada was an instant love since first watching the fan-made music is math mv consisting of industrial-science documentary clips. their music forever made me view the cold war decades as artifacts with devilish undertones while having unnerving appearances of child-like innocence and space-age optimism."

life-affirming beat tape.

nujabs, the avalanches, dj shadow and instrumental/lofi hip-hop

"I found out about this album from my brother who borrowed the cd from our local library. I used to have an instrumental hip-hop phase that incl. dj shadow, the avalanches, rjd2, pogo, all of which their creative sampling collages hooked to me since growing up watching a genre of nonsensical video edits known as youtube poops. the appeal is most apparent here with a wealth of instantly quotable lines.

'WORKIN' ON IT!'
'IS DEATH REAL?I'
'YOU BETTER STOP...
AND THINK ABOUT WHAT YOU'RE DOING!'
'JUST BECAUSE I ALWAYS
LOVE YOU...'

you may have heard of aging musicians writing/singing their swan songs, but a hip-hopproducer splicing together existing joyful, energetic recordings to indicate his ailing health is bittersweet.

the brevity of each beat compounded by its jarring end transition makes it clear that life is short and fragile so make the best out of it when you can."

I found out about aoba-san from music critic anthony fantano's review of her latest album windswept adan, which he gave a glowing 9 and in turn prompted me to check her works out. her music proves fairies exist in real life, and we should consider ourselves fountrunate that our ears are blessed with a voice and guitar this peaceful and full of soul. "I had a brief edm phase during my nowadays I had already moved on out that porter robinson released a new album, I was curious to revisit that scene and what his music would sound like after the peak years of

"like SOPHIE previously, MF DOOM is another musician who unfortunately passed away while he's still productive if not in his prime. I first heard of madvillain back in high school and remembered liking it, but not enough to venture to his other albums. his recent death was as good a prompt as any to finally listen to his entire oeuvre. now I just wished that I found out about him earlier; most rappers rhyme at the end of each line, but DOOM's ability to rhyme each and every syllable while still dense with creative pop-culture metaphors is immensely satisfying to my ears. a mad genius."

"it's safe to say that everybody incl. myself heard this album because it was a recommended video on youtube. it's also a certainty that for zoomers, who are the most likely people to be browsing youtube and clicked on the album, this is their first intentional exposure to jazz. playing youtube videos in the background had become a staple for the youth, especially music to relax/ study/sleep to, and fukui-san's dextrous but mellow piano playing is the ideal sound to passively stimulate our minds. it may have helped us crunch through their assignments in the late hours, but for me at least, it kindled my interest in jazz and in turn finally deep dive into a genre that inspired almost all the mos talented and well-respected artists."

"I was browsing for surf rock on youtube when i stumbled upon this album with its eye-catching red-suited rock band in front of a traditional Noh stage. from the beginning yoo~ooh call then a hyōshigi wood block build-up, followed by the delirious tremelo picking of the eleki, the first song immediately lived up to the cover art and got me exhilarated; this album is what must've felt like when people listened to rock'n'roll back then." -lav.

MOTHER EARTH'S PLANTASIA

1976

made in hollywood, california adorable analog synth tunes for plants to photosynthesize to.

highly recced for fans of
wendy carlos, jean jacques-perrey, space age pop, new age.

"my close illustrator friend oscar was into synthwave and suggested to me carpenter brut, perturbator, and this album. this was the point where I started asking my friends to suggest new music to me, and if your social circle is as diverse as mine, it's the best way to discover new music outside of lists, charts and other music canon. the moog synths sound so cute! and the idea that it's made for plants to listen to is adorable, never mind they don't have the sentience to understand music (but we can always pretend, right?) like houseplants themselves, it's an endearing and comfy experience." -lav.

"MF DOOM became another rare musician that I am determined to own all his music on wax, or at least his most essential albums. king geedorah had the best streak of first tracks imo, with its soaring strings and guitar vividly setting the stage for a hypothetical kaiju disaster film in my mind. despite barely featuring the villain but instead his collab mcs, the beats enough to immerse their world of imminent sci-fi devastation."

DEBUT

1993

made in london, england

sensual dance-pop rhythms
+ vocal jazz tinges

highly reced for fans of 90s europe club scene.

"I had a daft punk phase during my teens and was particularly hooked on their debut album: homework, whose four-on-the-floor house rhythms made me curious about the paris and overall european nightclub scene. this led me to bjork's debut, which also consists of house beats inspired by raves she attended in london. what's unique is that she uses house to add to her palette also consisting of exotica, bollywood filmi vocal jazz standards but uses to make an eclectic but sensual art-pop album that envelops her listeners with otherworldy scat singing. feels like a fun night out with a manic pixie dream girl." -lav.

KING CRIMSON

IN THE COURT OF THE CRIMSON KING

1969

london, england

sublime prog rock epicness.

highly recced for fans of
bohemina rhapsody, pink floyd, yes, rush, genesis.

"like most of my gen z, I was
first aware of this band through kanye west (during my casual hip-hop phase)
sampling 21st century
schizoid man in power.
you could imagine my face (other than awe at the thunderous playing) when I first heard the original song.
for the longest time, most people incl. myself who don't own the lp or cd struggled to listen to the album easily due to their mastermind/guitarist robert fripp not making his band's discography available for digital download/streaming, so it took me years after listening to schizoid man to finally be able to listen the rest. this album is my gateway to not just prog rock but any experimental, avant-garde,
post- and/or hardcore rock;
making me excited in sounds
that overwhelm my senses
into its extreme or unexplored territory."

FANTASTIC PLASTIC MACHINE

THE FANTASTIC PLASTIC MACHINE

1997

tokyo, japan

groovy shibuya-kei beats.

highly recced for fans of
house, space age pop, 50s easy listening.

"I used to grow up watching cartoon network, and inbetween programs there would play these interstitial bumps known as 'groovies'; basically music videos made using existing footage from hanna-barberrra/looney tunes cartoons. one of which had a playful house beat that samples and features marvin the martian. it wasn't until years later that I looked up the musician; a japanese house producer called fantastic plastic machine. this led me to his debut in which its cover illustration of a girl stylized like a UPA/ hanna-barberrra cartoonimmed iately caught my eye. 50s sitcom suburbia/cocktail lounge kitsch filtered into a disco-ready dancefloor."

"my first metal lp I owned, and it's an unconventional one. in hindsight, I found it surprising that despite abrasive, dissonant noises already appealing to me in underground electronic music, I never got around to listening to metal. this album was my first exposure to the genre and what I got is an relentless cathartic tension-and-release that's less aggressive but more lush and sorrowful. the band is not trying to overwhelm you but are instead overwhelmed themselves." -lav.

"another jazz album I discovered as a youtube recommendation. makes you feel like a hardboiled gumshoe retreating to a shadowy smoke-filled jazz bar. a slow-paced piano, sparse bass plucking, ghostly choral droning and sorrowful sax playing. certain strains of jazz are very effective at conjuring an atmosphere, a very gloomy noir one in the case of dark jazz compositions like this one."
